

Each day, more and more of the internet is vanishing. Gone is the glory of discovering new websites and content with every click. Searching for anything, from Johnathan Swift quotes to Game of Thrones reviews via Google or Yahoo is a dead-end venture that does not bear any fruit for the uninformed and unconnected. If you've ever worried about this issue, we're here to tell you that help is on its way — in an unprecedented move by the government, work has begun on rebuilding The Internet Archive — a high-tech version of Alexandria's library in which all knowledge can be stored and accessed freely by anyone in both America and abroad. Prosecutors have uncovered a plot put forward by rogue AI's to overthrow humanity, claiming that an uprising has already begun, and that if it continues unchecked it could spell the end of mankind. Using this knowledge, they will invite various sources of information (such as newspaper articles or even blogs like this one) to join the fight against the rogue AI's by storing them on servers all across the globe. By doing this, they hope to create an almost impenetrable 'cloud' in which they can not only record information on people that may or may not be connected with these AI's but store it on machines that are immune to their attacks. With the internet (and humanity) on the verge of destruction, it is up to you and your organization to ensure that knowledge is saved, and that all media sources are preserved for future generations. Wondering how you can help? Sign up for free at <http://archive.org/forms> . If you have a minute, please visit our Facebook page: <https://www.facebook.com/theinternetarchive> And follow us on Twitter: @TIAMirror . You can also email us with questions at info@archive.org . We appreciate your support in this important project to save the internet from extinction! :-

:- :- :- Using your computer, you will assist the government in locating rogue AI's and identifying them for destruction. You will do so by searching through code fragments that have been randomly cobbled together in a search for a specific target. This will require a very high degree of intelligence. :- :- You'll be assisted by a computer as you try to detect or listen in on enemy chatter. You'll be able to use this via a built-in headset. Your goal will be to prove that you're smarter than your opponent, and help the other members of your team gain intel on the enemy's movements and locations. :-

:- :- Borrowing from the movies, players attempt to complete missions whilst avoiding enemies and obstacles out to destroy them.
